ABSTRACT

Brief descriptions of approximately 750 sites approved by the American Camping Association which lease their facilities to others are listed alphabetically by state. Entries list camp address, contact address, capacity, special facilities, services, whether available year-round, and date of information. A narrative provides general information on what a camp site can offer, description of types of sites, services typically provided, and hints for choosing a facility. Two hundred and sixty-seven comprehensively evaluated sites which elected not to lease to outside organizations are listed separately in recognition of their approved designation. A directory of American Camping Association section offices around the United States is included. (LFL)

Exemplary Ethical Practices For Camp Directors/Owners

The members of the American Camping Association recognize and support the concept that custody of others' lives and welfare as well as the earth and its living things, calls for reverence for such life, in dedication and commitment to a higher good. Whatever form such a dedication and commitment may take, it must be essentially moral in nature.

The members further:

a. recognize and support the concept of an ecological conscience that a thing is right when it tends to preserve the integrity, stability and beauty of the biotic community.
b. recognize and support the concept that a camp is necessarily a total community within the society, with significant impact upon its inhabitants' capacity to learn, grow, develop, assimilate values, create and relate to other persons and the earth.
c. accept, respect and will be responsive to the rich diversity of our society.

The Association recognizes the Camp Director/Owner as the primary professional person assuming the greatest responsibility for actual camping practices. Therefore, the Association shall ask the person assuming this responsibility to subscribe to the following, to the extent permitted by law.

I shall seek to instill in my staff and campers not only a reverence for the land and its waters and all living things, but also an ecological conscience which reflects the conviction of individual responsibility for the health of that environment.

I shall maintain a camp membership enrollment policy without regard to religious affiliations (unless my camp is operated either by or in behalf of an established church for bona fide religious purposes), national origin, or race.

I shall hire, assign, promote and establish other conditions of employment for staff (professional, semi-professional or clerical) without regard to religious affiliation, (unless my camp is operated either by or in behalf of an established church or for bona fide religious purposes), national origin, or race.

I shall be truthful and fair in representing my camp and other camps by whatever medium of communications.

I shall be truthful and fair in securing and dealing with campers and staff.

I shall strive to conduct my camp in such a way as to build good will not only for my camp but also for the camping movement.

I shall strive to be responsible and sensitive to the local community influenced by the presence of my camp.

I shall provide a written enrollment policy for all applicants including fees, payment schedules, discounts, dates of arrival and departure, together with a clearly stated refund policy.

I shall provide for each staff member a written job description and contract including period of employment, compensation, benefits and exceptions.

I shall tell parents my procedures for promptly notifying them in the event their child is hospitalized or suffers accident or illness.

I shall maintain in professional confidence camper and staff information, observation, or evaluation.

I shall promptly consult with parents or guardians as to the advisability of removing a child from camp should it be clear that the child is not benefiting from the camp experience.

I shall refrain from actively recruiting any camper or staff member known by me to be currently enrolled or employed at another camp.

I shall honor my financial commitments to parents, staff, vendors and others.

I shall use the proper membership classification and camp registration category as may be defined by the National Board and shall use the ACA seal of accreditation in conformance with policies of the Standards Program.

I shall abide by ACA requirements and respect ACA guidelines for my profession.

Adopted by the Council of Delegates March 5, 1976, March 2, 1978, and February 16, 1980.

THE AMERICAN CAMPING ASSOCIATION

What is the American Camping Association?

The American Camping Association (ACA) is a nationwide, nonprofit, nonsectarian organization committed to the continuing values and benefits unique to the organized camp setting. Whether in a day camp or resident camp, the ACA believes that, through group living in the out-of-doors, both children and adults may find special kinds of experiences that help them to develop physically, mentally, socially and spiritually.

ACA works through thirty-two Sections in five regions, covering all fifty states and ten foreign countries. Its sectional, regional and national officers are volunteers elected by the membership. The National Board of Directors of ACA is partly elected and partly appointed; all Board members, drawn from a broad geographic base, have wide experience in program and administrative areas of organized camping. The Board constitutes a representative cross-section of camps served by the association.

For additional information on ACA, please write Armand Ball, American Camping Association, Bradford Woods, 5000 State Road 67 North, Martinsville, IN 46151-7902. A list of the Section offices begins on page 13.

INTRODUCTION

Why Choose an ACA Approved Site?

What makes all of the facilities listed in this Directory appealing is that they have been accredited by the American Camping Association. An ACA Approved Site has voluntarily sought an extensive, on-site examination by professionally trained visitors of the American Camping Association. To receive the Approved Site accreditation, the site has achieved acceptable scores in such areas of the standards as site and administration as well as the special services it offers such as food, health care, aquatics, horseback riding, etc. In addition the camp undergoes such an on-site examination every three years.

The accreditation for the facilities listed in this directory was current as of November 1, 1984, and the listing is updated annually at that time. Listings begin on page 16, but first it will be wise to review in a bit more detail the various facets of selecting that facility for your particular meeting or outing. The information that follows is fundamental and can be used as a basis for your discussions with the camp owner.

WHAT A CAMP SITE OFFERS

As a meeting planner, what kind of surprising things would happen if you scheduled your next overnight seminar, training session or recreational/business outing in a camp setting—far away from motel lobbies, rooms with no windows, room keys, and dress-up dinner requirements?

Instead of a walk after lunch around a noisy downtown area, could you imagine what a stroll along a forest trail would do for the climate of your gathering? Would the pine scent of the trees, the friendly sounds of nature, the gentle motion of a lake's waves brushing against a shoreline enhance your meeting?

You bet it would!

Your group could have the whole facility to yourselves. No phones, elevators, bellhops, desk clerks or change for tipping—carrying your own bag would be a small price to pay. And, the total price would probably be less expensive than hotel accommodations.

Depending on your choice, your gathering could be in a camp or conference center as modern as a motel along a freeway or as rustic as a group of cabins with a central dining facility miles from the freeway.

Your food would vary—depending on the kind of arrangements that you made with the camp. Recreation breaks would add sparkle to any meeting. Camps have tennis courts, softball diamonds, riflery and archery ranges, boating, swimming—and for the angler, a chance at some good fishing.

Weekend Retreats

As a leader of a church-related group or community youth organization, you may be looking for the most economical place to gather for fun and fellowship as well as some serious business.

Camps are a natural answer! Camps are accustomed to the best food possible for the least money and providing group accommodations for sleeping. In addition, all of the recreational facilities that serve summer camps are available most of the rest of the year, too. And, most accommodations will satisfy adults, too.

Summer Camps

Is your organization looking for a camp for a few weeks?

Many camps offer their facilities for rental during the weeks that campers are not there. Camps are able to provide day use or resident use for any number of days desired.

Not only are the buildings and site available for rental, but many camps can relieve you of the administrative hassle of food service, health care, and program supervision by providing these services as part of the total package. Sometimes year-round staff are available or some of the summer staff can continue on during your session.

Day Use

Many facilities are used for group meetings, corporate picnics, or social occasions on a day basis. Again the availability of food service and recreational facilities and staff as well as meeting rooms and ample parking make camps ideal for such purposes.

Conference Centers

Facilities of many camps lend themselves to conference use. With meeting rooms, sleeping, and eating accommodations readily available, many camps can make the transition very easily. The number and size of meeting rooms, as well as availability of chalk boards, easels, and audio visual equipment varies from camp to camp.

Whether weekend church youth retreats or weekday business conferences, camp can be an ideal and relaxing setting for the group.

Environmental Education

Some facilities are used for Environmental Education programs during some portion of the year. The types of programs and services vary from camp to camp.

Some camps simply rent their facilities to school systems for the operation of day or resident environmental education programs. In such cases, the school system ordinarily provides all personnel both for instruction and living arrangements. A resident ranger or manager provides any day-to-day consultation concerning facilities, repairs, or maintenance needs.

Other camps provide not only the staff which live with the students/campers but also staff who work with the teachers from the school system in the instruction. Since year-round staff can have a great deal of experience in and knowledge of the surrounding natural environment and history, this can greatly aid the classroom teacher who may not have such. There are many advantages to utilizing the resources provided by the staff. Though an ACA Approved Site may have a number of user groups which are ACA Accredited Camps, each user group must request its own accreditation based upon its program and staff.

SERVICES PROVIDED BY CAMP

Housing

Camp housing facilities vary greatly. Many camps that operate twelve months a year now have some facilities which provide rooms for one or two persons with private or semiprivate baths. Other camps offer housing with 4 or more to a room with common bath areas.

Youth user groups may desire the more traditional camp housing such as camper cabins, dormitories, or tents since such accommodations often provide a less expensive stay.

Adult groups that desire more comfort and privacy can find camps with facilities to meet their needs, some with motel-like accommodations. Charges for these type accommodations naturally are higher than the more rustic accommodations.

> Many camps can relieve you of the administrative hassle of food service, health care, and program supervision by providing these as part of the total package.

Linens

Some facilities will have linen service available while others will depend on users to bring their own linen or sleeping bags. In some cases, towels are also available, but the user group should inquire ahead of time.

Food Service

Resident camps have full service kitchens and dining rooms available and may provide several levels of food service. Prices will vary depending on the menus selected and the degree of table service desired. The user group should share the age and character of the group coming to the event as well as the activity level of the group and suggest the type of menu desired.

Many camps use user groups to set and clean tables as well as to pick up food from the kitchen counter, thus saving manpower. While this approach may be quite satisfactory to youth user groups, adult groups may desire that these services be provided by camp personnel. This will affect the charge for meals, of course.

Some camps are willing to allow groups to provide their own food service personnel and to use their kitchen/dining room without the camp's own personnel. Of course, the user group is responsible for breakage and/or damage.

Health Service

Camps generally have areas designated for first aid and rest for injured or ill campers. Most camps will not have a Registered Nurse on their staff except in the summer. However, many camps may have a certified first aid person on their year-round staff who, upon request, may be able to provide emergency services. Therefore, if the user group desires emergency first aid services and is not bringing a first aider and first aid supplies, the group will need to see what services are available through the camp.

Special Program Activities

Since camps offer a variety of program activities during the summer season, many of those activities provide a recreational outlet for user groups. In most cases, recreational equipment such as balls, bats, table games, table tennis, etc. is available for use upon request. However, more complex activities may be available only if camp staff are in charge or certain assurances, (such as, the activity will be supervised by certified personnel) are made to the camp administration.

If the user group wishes to swim, canoe, or boat, the camp will probably require the group to have a person with Advanced Lifesaving or Lifeguard training be in charge. Other camps will have core staff with the appropriate credentials who will supervise and operate the program.

Camps often have specialists in the environmental education field who can provide nature hikes or presentations for groups.

Out-of-camp trips by canoe, bicycle, horseback, or on foot are sometimes available under leadership of the camp's trained staff. In northern climes, winter equipment and activities such as snowshoeing, cross country skiing, downhill skiing, or skating are often available. Additional charges for use of the equipment or staff services will vary from camp to camp.

Transportation

Many camps will have van or bus transportation available for field trips or pick up transportation from transportation terminals. There will be an extra charge for such services.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT FACILITY

Important Considerations

These are several points to consider when you select the facility that is right for you.

First, determine the purpose of your event. If the event is social in nature, meeting rooms could be incidental as long as there was adequate rainy day protection. On the other hand, if business or group instruction is the primary purpose, the type of meeting rooms as well as the equipment available can be the deciding factor. Second, determine the distance you are willing to go from the central location. Third, look at the capacity of the camps listed compared to the size of your group. Many camps can accommodate several smaller groups simultaneously, so do not eliminate a site because the capacity is much larger than your group. In such cases, it is wise to inquire about the availability of facilities you need since you may be sharing with other small groups.

At this point, invite additional information from each facility you have selected to provide details about fees and additional services. Directors will be happy to answer specific questions or respond to special needs your group may have.

First hand inspection of a facility is advised in advance of use. Normally you can tentatively reserve dates for use of a facility, and then visit the camp at the time you have reviewed the written agreement and are ready to finalize it. This will give you an opportunity to deal with specifics that come to mind when you are on the site.

Written Agreements with the Camp

Any user group should insist on a written agreement with the camp at the time a deposit is made. Such an agreement provides a clear indication of what can be expected of the camp and the user group and serves as a protection to both.

Though conditions of such agreements vary from camp to camp, there are a number of common elements which should be addressed:

- Cancellation—under what conditions, what time period, monetary obligations
- Property Damage—normal wear and tear, replacement, check-in and out
- Telephone—availability, are long distance calls possible
- Snacks/coffee breaks—availability, cost
- Audio visuals—availability, operator, cost
- Room set-up desired
- Alcohol—usage permitted, provided, permitted to bring
- Equipment use—specific equipment needed and cost
- Emergencies—transportation, first aid, location of nearby medical services
- Program activities—availability, supervision, equipment, cost
- Payment of fees—how billed, when due

What to Do if Problems Arise

Though the vast majority of users find that camps provide an ideal setting for their event, occasionally a problem or misunderstanding will arise between the site and the user group. Most camp directors are very anxious to know about any user complaints and to resolve differences as soon as possible. Therefore, the first step is to write or call the director and give the specifics of the complaint. Normally, the problem is solved right there.

However, if the camp is not responsive, there are other alternatives. Directors of camps affiliated with the American Camping Association also agree to a Code of Exemplary Practices and therefore, are responsible for following the Code printed on the inside front cover. If the complaint that arises falls within the Code, then a formal complaint may be filed with the American Camping Association, Bradford Woods, Martinsville, IN 46151. A local disinterested party will investigate the complaint and try to bring about a reconciliation. If the complaint should be found to be valid, and the camp director does not correct the matter, several courses of action are open to ACA, including the removal of accreditation. However, it must be noted that the Association is a voluntary one and cannot serve the role of small claims court.

Mahn-Go-Tah-See

Outdoor Education Center

A place of natural splendor where educational and recreational opportunities for all ages abound amid the grandeur of Northern Michigan!

Mahn-Go-Tah-See is a multi-use, Outdoor Education-Conference Center which annually hosts boy's camping, coed band and sports camps, conservation and ecology groups, and many other church, family and special interest organizations.

Located just north of Hale, Michigan on the edge of the Huron National Forest, Mahn-Go-Tah-See is a sanctioned wildlife preserve with over 250 acres of wooded hills and meadows, and 1½ miles of natural lakeshore on beautiful Loon Lake.

A certain silent magic resides in our ancient forests, and creates an atmosphere of learning and fun unparalleled in our modern times.

Tradition is built on continuity and tempered with integrity.

- Health, happiness, and safety are our primary concerns.
- Meals feature a hearty and plentiful northwoods fare.
- Our safety record has remained unscarred for over 55 years.
- Continuity of leadership produces the kind of progressive programming that has made Mahn-Go-Tah-See a forerunner in Outdoor Education.
- Program offerings of sailing, riflery, swimming, crafts, canoeing, nature awareness, fishing, campcraft, hiking and evening programs are available to special interest groups who visit Mahn-Go-Tah-See.

These are but some of the features which make Mahn-Go-Tah-See a tradition amoung families and groups who have returned to our forests over the past half century.

LEASING AN APPROVED SITE

Sites are arranged in this directory in two parts: those that lease to others, and those that do not lease to others. This part deals with those sites that are available for leasing.

Sites are arranged alphabetically by states. The first address listed is the actual location of the camp. The second address may be different if the camp has a city office during the fall, winter, and spring. This is the "Contact" address and it usually gives the name of a person to faciliate communication. While not all listings are identical, they usually provide similar information about the facilities, housing, and what the site will provide to leasing groups. The information is brief and comes directly from a computer at the American Camping Association. The information was developed from forms returned by the sites. Persons who wish to lease the sites should seek greater detail from the directors of the sites.

FACILITIES FOR CONFERENCES, RETREATS AND OUTDOOR EDUCATION

A Directory of Sites Approved by the American Camping Association

For your important meetings, try a beautiful outdoor setting . . . away from city traffic noises and distractions, yet modern and comfortable. Approved sites offer quiet, secluded locations—providing your group with leisure-time activities, but offering maximum privacy conducive to productive meeting sessions.

The American Camping Association's new directory lists

(1) Sites which have qualified through an extensive examination by trained visitors.
(2) Sites evaluated in terms of administration as well as special services offered.
(3) Sites whose directors agree to a Code of Exemplary Practices.

The Directory also features articles detailing:

What a camp site offers,
What services are provided,
How to choose the right facility.

Each listing provides you with the address and phone of the site, the contact person, capacity and special facilities. Facilities for Conferences, Retreats, and Outdoor Education can show you how to break away from the noisy, complicated world for your next meeting!
